

Touching Eden

Residential

Role: Project lead (Interior)

Touching Eden

1,789 sqm, Singapore, 2023

Role: Project Lead (Interior)
Studio: Edmund Ng Architects

The client for this project is a boutique luxury home developer selling a completely bespoke architecture and customised interiors as a complete package. As the interior designer for this project, I had to work very closely with the Architect, Landscape Architect, Lighting Consultant, M&E Consultant, Developer, and Contractors to realise the final product and present a cohesive front to the Owner. We were commissioned to provide complete interior design services including purchasing and styling of all decorative items including flatware so the Owner could just move in with a suitcase.

Located on the edge of the Singapore Botanic Gardens, the architecture of the building is full of natural light and surrounded by landscaping. Muted neutrals were selected to create a serene and relaxing mood, all the better to appreciate the surrounding nature. Dappled sunlight reflect off sumptuous materials like natural stone, fine grained veneer and fine Italian leather.

The internal layout and furniture was carefully selected to be low profiled to maximise the uninterrupted views from inside the house.

Featuring designer furniture from Giorgetti and Minotti, the interiors of this house exude a quiet and sophisticated luxury.

As a customised project, I designed a home office Owner to understand his working habits and requirements for his personal study,

Postscript:

This project is currently shortlisted for the best Residential Design in World Architecture Festival

